

HRG Principal to Speak at 2009 Real Estate Summit

Hagen to Present “Managing Seller’s Expectations” Topic

Carrollton, GA – Kim Hagen, President and CEO of Hagen Realty Group, will be a guest speaker at the 2009 Real Estate Summit in Atlanta, Georgia. The two day summit, being held at the Marriott Perimeter Center and hosted by the National Auctioneers Association Education Institute on May 18 & 19, expects to see attendance of real estate auction professionals from across the country.

This year’s summit will help real estate professionals navigate through tumultuous economic times, and will offer an array of topics to assist these professionals in a current real estate market that keeps everyone guessing.

Mr. Hagen will present the topic of Managing Seller’s Expectations in the Current Market. With vast experience in the commercial real estate arena, he knows all too well the management clients require. “If you are not up front with your client in the sale of their property, you are headed for disaster” says Hagen, “If you don’t manage their expectations, they could very well be disappointed on sale day, but if you provide updates and summaries on the progress of their sale, they will be realistic in those expectations and will make informed decisions”.

In addition to Mr. Hagen’s commercial auction experience, he has been a highlighted speaker for such organizations as the American Bankruptcy Institute, the Florida Bar, National Association of Realtors, Trigild Lender’s Conference, U.S. Small Business Administration as has contributed to articles for CNN Money, Wall Street Journal, and ABC News.
